What is Woman? What is Femme?

I got to meet the residents of Renaissance House, and participated in a discussion about the intersection of womanhood, femininity, and race. I learned a lot from hearing other people's perspectives, and I was able to make a point about the differences between the concepts of toxic masculinity and toxic femininity. This was also my first time visiting a theme house on campus, so I got to see what the living conditions are like in case I become interested in living in such housing later in my Wheaton career.
